FALSE:

The medical recommendation (from doctors and scientific evidence) is that women should be encouraged to breastfeed, including those who smoke. You or your partner may disagree, but the benefits of breastfeeding are so good that they outweigh the risk of the tiny amounts of nicotine or cotine in breastmilk of smokers. Babies of mothers who smoke are more likely to get respiratory (breathing) infections, and have a higher risk of SIDS. But babies of mothers who breastfeed are protected against respiratory infections, and have a lower risk of SIDS. So mothers who have not been able to quit smoking SHOULD DEFINITELY BREASTFEED because it helps the baby. It is always a good idea to quit smoking- see your doctor for help and ask your partner and family for support.

FALSE:

The baby's mouth on the nipple and areola does not make the nipple or breast dirty. You don't need soap on your breasts because it will dry out the skin. Rubbing alcohol should not get anywhere near your breasts! Express a little breast milk after each feeding onto the nipple area and let it air dry- breast milk has immune and healing ingredients that will help heal and cleanse your skin. A regular shower once a day with just water on the breast is fine.

It is always good to eat healthy, but your milk will be good no matter what you eat (chips, orange pop, don't tell me what else). You will feel better and have more energy if you eat well (protein, low-fat, lots of fruits and vegetables).

We know you will burn up an extra 400-500 calories every day when you breastfeed, so you really can lose weight quickly! Plus with the uterus shrinking due to the breast milk let down hormone oxytocin many women feel their tummy gets flat sooner than with formula feeding.

Check it out on www.mypyramid.gov! “Drinking a moderate amount (up to 2 to 3 cups a day) of coffee or other caffeinated beverages does not affect your baby.” If you drink a cup of coffee and breastfeed shortly after you might notice the baby is not ready to go to sleep- so have your caffeine earlier in the day.

FALSE:

The hormones of pregnancy make your breasts get larger, and then the breasts go down (shrink) after the pregnancy hormones are done. That is why women’s breasts are different after they have a baby. If you breastfeed your breasts will stay larger while you are breastfeeding (the milk hormones) and then they will go down after the baby weans. So if you want full time perky breasts, the thing is say “no” to pregnancy, not to breastfeeding! When the baby is breastfeeding your nipple should be way in the back of the baby’s mouth (good latch) so your nipples feel good- get help within 24 hours if there is nipple pain, but for your own comfort, not because the nipple will get messed up.

TRUE.

Your nipples and breasts are not used to the baby feeding. But you can be in control of this: only accept deep comfortable latch- don't let the baby suck on the nipple only. Use different positions to feed and start on the other side each time. Get help if you need to. You will feel tugging and pulling but pain IS NOT part of breastfeeding.

Your baby loves how you smell because it's you! What you do for yourself everyday does not need to change. Just don't put your lotion or perfume right on the breast or nipple- only lanolin or expressed breast milk can go there- but everywhere else is fine.

FALSE:

That is not true. The baby drinking milk from your breasts is completely natural. That is what the breasts are for. The milk "let down" hormone, oxytocin, gives you a deeply calm, relaxed feeling AND it helps you to want to hold and bond to your baby – none of that is nasty at all. Your breasts might release milk during sex because of the same hormone (oxytocin), and you might have a mild sexual feeling while breastfeeding, which it is OK to enjoy.
